Message from the Headmaster

After attending two rugby festivals this holiday, I felt it necessary to repeat a blurb that was published in a previous newsletter. It was written by Mr Keith Richardson, a past Headmaster of Wynberg Boys' High School. I believe it is wellworth sharing every year.

School sport is not played for the benefit or the glory of the school or the egos of the coaches or the ambitions of the parents – it is played to benefit the players. Whatever the level of the schoolboy player, we want him to learn the lessons of sport, because they are lessons of life. In the end, these lessons could develop the confidence and self-esteem in a player and he will learn, as a young sportsman, that bitterness and sweetness are opposite sides of the same coin.

Some advice for parents:

- Support your son and attend the matches, no matter what side he is in;
- Always be there for him, especially in the 'down times';
- By all means set the bar for him but always praise his achievements, especially when he has tried hard to reach this bar;

- · Praise effort and commitment much more than results;
- · Never criticise the coach, as it will confuse the players. It not only divides loyalty, but offers an excuse. Don't fall for the common South African sporting curse of blaming the coach or referee;
- · Never over-emphasize winning, as it will only lead to a fear of failure. One of the curses of schoolboy sport is an unbeaten season;
- · Do not relive your own sporting career (or lack of it) through your son. This leads to frustration and disappointment on both sides:
- · Be a true sporting spectator. Let the referee handle the game and let your son make his own mistakes. He will learn more that way.
- · All parents want what is best for their sons but then, so does every coach and every school.
- · If we expect our players to behave like sportsmen on the field, then it is important for adults not to behave like children on the side-lines.

There is no doubt that sport can play a pivotal role in education and it is our job as parents and teachers to help our children cope with the pressures in today's highly competitive world.

With this in mind, for the players who are participating in sport this weekend,

"The game you play this weekend will never be repeated - make the most of every minute".

Steelband performances during the April holidays.

The steelband performed at an environmental conference hosted at AMAZWI Museum on Monday 28 March. On Saturday 2 April the band braved wet and muddy conditions as they warmed crowds at the Bathurst Show. At both events the boys received many positive comments and compliments. Well done to all the boys involved for giving up their time during the holidays and presenting professional performances. The band is currently preparing for a number of performances during the coming weeks and also completing the presentation for this year's Virtual East London Lions Eisteddfod.

The marimba A team has been accompanying the school during assembly this week and a little last term. It's always so enjoyable to have something different during school assemblies. They are preparing for the Port Rex eisteddfod and we wish them the best of luck!

Junior School

Finally, after having the last father and son camp in 2019, we were able to have another camp this year. What a success, almost 400 people camped together on the Junor field. The boys enjoyed running around, jumping on the jumping castle and dads enjoying each other's company around a campfire. Thank you to everyone who supported this fundraiser.

We would like to thank the following for their valued contributions:

Chicken Hut - Sponsored a 100 rolls for the boerewors. Andre Crous - Sponsored almost 200 extra pieces of wors. Werner (Shell garage bakery) - Sponsored 400 rolls for the boerewors.

Clint Bradfield (Print my photos) - Sponsored the jumping castle.

Looking forward to the 2023 edition!

The Junior School monitors were inducted at an assembly on Thursday, 7 April 2022. They attended training on Thursday evening. We wish them strength and wisdom as they serve the school during their term of office.
